Clam Soup.

First catch, your clams—along the ebbing edge of salt water you'll find the precious wedges. With backs up, looking in the sandy bottom. Pull in your iron rake, and lo! you've got 'em. Take thirty large ones, put a basin under. And cleave with knife the stony jaws asunder. Add water (three cups) to the active liquor. Bring to a boil (and, by-the-way, the quicker it boils the better, if you do it cutely). Now add the clams, chopped up and minced minutely. Allow a longer boil of just five minutes. And while it bubbles quickly stir within its tumultuous depths, where still the molasses mutter. Four tablespoons of flour and four of butter. A pint of milk, some pepper to your taste. Stir once more, and it's ready to be eaten. Fruit of wave! oh, dainty and delicious! Food for the gods! Ambrosia for Apicius! Worthy to thrill the throat of the Roman Venus, Or titillate the palate of Silenus.

Oh, the sweet hour of halcyon rest, At evening's calm and tranquil close! We sink into our little nest And woo the goddess of repose; But—course on that mosquito pest Which breathes its treble round our nose! —Boston Post.

Yes, dear, the still night's tranquil sleep That comes like zephyr from the sea: Your cares all lost in slumber deep, From work and worryment set free. But, then, you must your patience keep To strive a light and calm to see.

VARIETY.

It was a bright boy who told his teacher that there were three sexes—the male sex, the female sex, and the insects.

New Orleans Picayune:—"The New York Herald says: 'General Butler will undoubtedly be the candidate of the oleomargarine party.' Of course the old man knows on which side his bread is buttered."

A young man who appeared at Deadwood in a pair of white pants was promptly escorted out of town. "We can stand a bled shirt, you know," a miner explained, "but when it comes to wearin' bled drawers, we just make them git up and git."

"Why don't you wash the bottom of your feet, John?" asked a grandmother of a boy when he was performing the operation before retiring for the night; to which he gravely replied: "Why, granny, you don't think I'm going to stand up in bed, do you?"

Yung man, perhaps you had better be a munky than a philosopher; if you play the munky well, mankind will look upon themselves as superior to you; play the philosopher they will consider you superior to them, and shun you accordingly.—Josh Billings.

Norwich Bulletin: One of those Sunday-school teachers who are always doing good, asked the ideas of children, asked her class what they supposed Daniel said when he was placed in the lion's den. One of her scholars, who has a practical turn of mind, answered, "Good-bye! I'm a goner."

When Mr. Billowy went home and saw a handsome bouquet resting on one of the prior chairs he mentally observed, "The matter is one to look beautiful flowers lie there to wither, so he took them up tenderly, procured a basin of water and placed them carefully therein, and the same instant his wife gave a piercing shriek and fainted dead away. But it was too late. Mrs. Billowy's new Spring bonnet was utterly ruined.

"THE EQUATOR DENIED."—Professor: "Define the equator." Student: "It is the place where the sun crosses the line." Professor: "What line?" Student: "I suppose it's the one referred to by Euclid, in which he says that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points." Professor: "Next." Student: "No. 2."

"There's no such line. It has been shown to be purely imaginary—a mere superstition of sailors. Columbus sailed across it, and it wasn't there."

BEECHER'S TENDRENESS TO THE WALK.—The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher went to a hotel in a city of New Jersey for a night's stay. He ordered supper, and after taking a few sips of coffee called the colored waiter and said: "Can you give me your service this evening?" "Yes, sah," said the waiter briskly. "The matter is one of importance," said Mr. Beecher solemnly. "Perhaps I had better speak to the landlord myself about it." "Oh no, sah," said the waiter, "I can give you, sah, all the time you need."

"Well, then," said Mr. Beecher, with added solemnity, "I want you to sit up to-night with this coffee. It is so weak it is going to die before morning." There was a moment of pathetic silence, and the waiter withdrew.

The New Orleans Picayune requests politicians to make less noise at their meetings, as their vociferations disturb the yellow fever patients. Which state of things reminds the Baltimore Gazette of the persistent and noisy player who crawled out from under the wreck of a steamship saloon on the Pacific, and cried out above the shrieks and prayers of the passengers, and the howling of the tempest: "Remember, boys, I played the tray for low."

Old Hicks was an awful snorer. He could be heard farther than a blacksmith's forge, but his wife became so accustomed to it, that it soothed her to repose. They were a very domestic couple never slept apart for many years. At length the old man was required to attend court at some distance. The first night after, his wife never slept a wink; she missed the snoring. The next night passed away in the same manner without sleep. She was getting in a very bad way, and probably would have died, had it not been for the ingenuity of a servant girl. She took the coffee-mill into her mistress's chamber, and ground her to sleep at once.

A minister in the north was rebuking one of his hearers for his non-attendance at church. The accused vindicated himself on the plea of a dislike to long sermons. "Dead man," said the reverend minister, a little nettled at the insinuation, "threw out against himself, 'if ye donna mend ye may land yourself' where ye'll no be troubled wi' many sermons, either long or short."

"Well, albins are," returned John, "but it mayna be for want of ministers."

The Military Trade Reviewer vouches for the following: A gentleman well known on Broadway informed his wife that his zeal in the good cause demanded his attention at Ocean Grove, and they parted affectionately, she wishing him Godspeed on his Christian errand and enjoining him to tarry for her and the child. Mr. H. left that afternoon with a party of jolly dogs and in due time was in comfortable quarters at Ocean Beach. It was announced that some tableaux were to take place in the hotel that evening and at the hour fixed, the jolly dogs adjourned to this representation. Tableau after tableau was presented, and at length it was announced that the next will be, "The Deserted Mother and Child."

The certain ray upon a lady in graceful posture bending lovingly over her darling. The silence was suddenly broken by a startling exclamation from Mr. —. The lady in the tableau, oblivious of her part, turned her head and met her husband's eye. Several of her friends in the secret burst into a roar. Mr. — made for the door, but was finally detained. But all's well that ends well. Madame forgave the error this time and ten minutes later they were whirling in the mill.
